Worldwide Birding Adventures

Djibouti

Extension II

10th July to 14th July 2022 (5 days)

Arabian Golden Sparrow by David Hodinott

Simply put, Djibouti is one of Africa's least visited birding tours destinations. This trip is aimed at finding Djibouti's only endemic, Djibouti Spur-fowl, along with a number of other species that can be difficult to locate elsewhere. These include Somali Starling, beautiful Arabian Golden Sparrow, Sombre Rock Chat, White-eyed Gull, Crab-plover and Somali Sparrow. This tour takes us to places where very few birders have ever been; which, along with some superb birding, witnessing spectacular scenery and diverse and interesting cultures, makes this Djibouti extension a must for the intrepid birder.

TOUR ROUTE MAP...

THE TOUR IN DETAIL...

Day 1: Arrival in Djibouti. On arrival in Djibouti, you will be met and transferred to a comfortable hotel in the city. From our convenient base, we'll then explore the nearby Djibouti Bay, where we'll search for the Red Sea endemic White-eyed Gull as well as Sooty and Slender-billed Gulls, Gull-billed and Saunders's Terns, and Crab-plover. Other species we may see in the vicinity include Eurasian Spoonbill (of the resident race archeri), European Oystercatcher and Kentish Plover amongst a host of waders, and Clamorous Reed Warbler. The coastal scrub supports an interesting array of species and key birds we'll look for include the beautiful Arabian Golden Sparrow that is very localised in Africa, tricky Somali Sparrow, Graceful Prinia and Somali Bulbul. The area also hosts Nile Valley Sunbird and the beautifully marked Rosy-patched Bushshrike.

Day 2: Djibouti to Foret du Day. We depart this morning for Foret du Day, a very scenic drive since we will be crossing the Rift Valley with its huge, black lava flows. En route we may see Bonelli's and Verreaux's Eagles, Black-crowned Sparrow-Lark, White-crowned Wheatear, and we'll keep a careful watch for Arabian and Menetries's Warblers and the vagrant Cretzschmar's Bunting. Further along we will stop to take photo's of Lake Assal which is the lowest point in Africa, at 155 metres below sea-level. We then overnight at Campiment du Touristique, Foret du Day. At Foret du Day itself we'll make a concerted effort to find the endangered endemic, Djibouti Spurfwowl, as well as Somali Starling. Other species we may see in the vicinity are Gambaga Flycatcher, Abyssinian White-eye, Sombre Rock Chat and, if we are lucky, Verreaux's Eagle-Owl.

Day 3: Foret du Day to Dittilou. We have the entire morning to explore the area around Foret du Day. Our key target is the localised, afore-mentioned Djibouti Spurfwowl, which we will put in as much effort as necessary to hopefully track down and acquire decent views of. Thereafter we will drive to Dittilou, where we have chances for Green-winged Pytilia (a probable split called Yellow-tailed Pytilia), Yellow-rumped Seedeater and an almost mythical species called Toha Sunbird, which has only been seen by the discoverer. Other species we may see here include Bruce's Green Pigeon, Bonelli's Eagle, Shikra, Eastern Yellow-billed and Hemprich's Hornbill, Yellow-breasted Barbet, Nubian Woodpecker, Grey-headed Batis, Glossy-backed Drongo, Red-tailed and Great Grey Shrike, Basra Reed and Menetries's Warbler, Abyssinian White-eye, Somali Starling, Black Redstart and Yellow-rumped Seedeater.

Day 4: Dittilou to Djibouti. After a final morning's birding around Dittilou we will return to Djibouti, where we will overnight and celebrate our brief, yet rewarding journey over a good meal and no doubt a well-deserved couple of cold ones!

Day 5: Djibouti and departure.

Depending on our time of departure we may have the opportunity to do some further birding near our hotel, after which we will make our way to the airport to catch our international flights home.

- It can be hot in some areas, whilst the highlands can get cold especially at night. Rain may be experienced.
- There are some long drives on this Djibouti trip but we will take regular rest and birding stops to break the journeys. They are scenic and full of interesting waypoints!
- Accommodation is basic but comfortable.
- The food in Djibouti is generally fairly basic and consists of both western and local cuisine. We will also enjoy many “bush breakfasts and lunches” on the side of the road whilst in good birding areas.
