Trip report compiled by Tour Leader: Daniel Keith Danckwerts

Tour Summary

India is perhaps one of the most exciting destinations in all of Asia and our northern India circuit routinely produces around 400 birds including several incredibly sought-after species as well as a number of highly desirable mammals. Avian highlights on this particular tour included the unique Ibisbill and Wallcreeper, better than ever views of Koklass Pheasant, the Indian endemic Painted Spurfowl, the reclusive Eurasian and Black Bitterns, the stately Sarus Crane, skulking Ruddy-breasted Crake, an incredible thirteen species of owl, seventeen species of woodpecker, the diminutive Collared Falconet, the unbeatable Red-billed Blue and Common Green Magpies, and Golden Bush Robin. Not forgetting the mammals, we enjoyed exquisite views of seven individual Tigers – perhaps the main drawcard for many people visiting India – as well as Chital, Sambar, Asian Elephant, Jungle Cat and Common Palm Civet to just name a few. Over and above, we dedicated some time to visit several historical sites including the Taj Mahal; rightly considered one of the seven man-made wonders of the world.

Tour in Detail

Our tour through northern India began in Delhi – India’s sprawling capital and a real feast for the senses. Given our group’s early arrival, we met for a welcome dinner where we discussed the plans for the forthcoming weeks. Several members of the group also managed to squeeze in a little birding earlier in the day and were successful in finding 31 species – an impressive total given the central location of our hotel. Highlights included the Bank Myna, Yellow-footed Green Pigeon, Indian Grey Hornbill, and Booted Eagle. It was then an early night for all after the long journey to get to Delhi.

The next morning, we met for a short walk around the grounds of our hotel. Here, we found Bank Myna, both House and Indian Jungle Crows, Common Tailorbird and Hume’s Leaf Warbler. A number of Rhesus Monkeys and Five-striped Palm Squirrels also made an appearance. After breakfast, we then enjoyed watching small numbers of Dusky Crag Martin fly overhead. A change in our schedule then afforded us a little downtime before we left for the Okhla Bird Sanctuary – located in east Delhi right beside the Yamuna River. Once at the Okhla Bird Sanctuary, the minutes seemed to absolutely fly by and, before we knew it, the afternoon was up, and we had found an impressive list of birds. Waterfowl were abundant and we enjoyed flocks of Gadwall, Eurasian Widgeon, Northern Pintail, Greylag Goose, Common Pochard, Indian Spot-billed Duck, as well as our only Tufted Duck of the entire trip. Other notable species included the Red-naped, Black-headed and Glossy Ibises, Intermediate and Eastern Cattle Egrets, White-breasted Waterhen, Indian Pond Heron, and the stately Black-necked Stork. Ruddy-breasted Crake was also heard calling from within the dense reedbeds. The surrounding grasslands and woodlands gave us Western Yellow and Citrine Wagtails, Grey Francolin, Red-wattled Lapwing, Chiffchaff, localised Striated Babbler, Lineated Barbet, and Yellow-footed Green Pigeon. A small herd of Nilgai were also spotted across the shore. Reluctantly, we then transferred to Old Delhi passing the indescribable Red Fort en route. After a quick dinner, we then boarded our overnight train – an experience in itself – to Ramnagar. This proved far more comfortable than any of us thought and, as soon as the train started, things quickly settled down and we enjoyed some rest.

Arriving in Ramnagar in the chilly early hours of the morning, we quickly transferred to a nearby hotel where we had time to freshen up and enjoy a hot cup of masala chai. From there, we visited a site on the Kosi River where we hoped to find Ibisbill; unfortunately, we drew a blank on this highly desirable species, but we were able to find River Lapwing, Little Egret, Little Cormorant, Indian Peafowl, and Crested Kingfisher. En route back to the Gypsy jeeps, we encountered an impressive mixed-species foraging flock containing the Slaty-blue, Grey-headed Canary and Taiga Flycatchers, Yellow-bellied and White-throated Fantails, Black-chinned Babbler, Indian White-eye, and Grey-capped Pygmy Woodpecker. A busy morning indeed! After breakfast, we visited the same site again and were rewarded with views of the incredible Rufous Treepie, both Greater and Black-rumped Flamebacks, more Black-chinned Babblers, Indian Robin and (best of all!) the highly-prized Wallcreeper; the latter a monospecific family! Making our way slowly along the Kosi River, stopping at vantage points to scan, we eventually arrived at our comfortable guesthouse. Here we enjoyed a delicious lunch – entertained by troops of Rhesus Monkeys and Tarai Grey Langurs. Best was yet to come, however, as we quite unexpectedly located a pair of Spot-bellied Eagle Owls on our afternoon outing. Other notable encounters included the Blue Whistling Thrush, Common Kingfisher, Besra White-crested Laughingthrush, Greater Yellownape, Grey-headed Woodpecker, Blue-throated Barbet and the jewel-like Rufous-bellied Niltava. Some of us were also lucky enough to see the skulking Chestnut-headed Tesia. Finally, we returned to the hotel for the evening where we tried to locate Collared Scops Owl though we were unsuccessful in this regard; the bird was heard calling briefly but, despite our best efforts, we simply were not able to locate it in the dense canopy.

The next day, we began with a short walk along the Kosi River. Here, we located an incredible three Tawny Fish Owls on their day roost – a real treat! The river itself produced Brown Dipper while flocks of Slaty-headed Parakeets flew noisily overhead. En route back to the lodge, we then enjoyed a small mixed-species foraging flock containing the Red-breasted Flycatcher, Lemon-rumped Warbler, Grey-headed Canary Flycatcher and Bar-winged Flycatcher Shrike. Loading up after a quick breakfast, we then drove to the entrance to Jim Corbett National Park. The remainder of the morning was then spent driving to Dhikala with many fantastic species seen along the way. Highlights included the diminutive Collared Falconet, Blue Whistling Thrush, Pallas's Fish Eagle, Kalij Pheasant, and Red Junglefowl. We arrived in time for lunch but were quickly distracted by the numbers of birds on the lake below; flocks of well over a hundred River Terns, several Black-necked Storks, and Eurasian Teals were just some of the highlights. It was here that we also viewed our first Gharials while Smooth-necked Otter was something of a surprise. Suddenly, we got the news that a Tiger had been seen nearby. Needless to say, we were off like a flash. We arrived at the site within only about ten minutes and were treated with a breath-taking view of three individuals (a tigress with two youngsters in some long grass). We watched them for well over an hour and were even lucky enough to see one of the youngsters chase down a Chital although it appeared that the hunt was unsuccessful. New bird species on our afternoon drive then included the Lesser Coucal, Plum-headed Parakeet, and Siberian Stonechat. The park itself also gave us Sambar, Chital, and Wild Boar. Finally, after dinner, we managed to track down a single Brown Hawk Owl; our third owl species in just as many days!

The next day we had a full day to explore the Jim Corbett National Park. Here we enjoyed a fine day of birding with many important targets and a number of surprises. We started off in the grasslands where, after considerable effort, we were finally able to track down a pair of Black Francolins feeding in the road. We were even treated to a rare display, seeing the male droop and quiver his wings to impress the female. While she ran back for cover, we were certainly left impressed. Other highlights in the grasslands included the Water, Richard's and Paddyfield Pipits, White-browed and Citrine Wagtails, the skulking Ruddy-breasted Crake, several quick Crested Buntings, Oriental Skylark, Lesser Coucal, Black-throated Thrush, and Common Rosefinch. At the wetland edge, we were treated to a cracking Great Bittern flying overhead; a real highlight for all. From there, we then explored the forest edge. The best birds here were a Large-tailed Nightjar at its day roost, Green-billed Malkoha and Himalayan Rubythroat. After lunch, we visited the forest bordering the Ramganga River. With the most beautiful backdrop – we enjoyed sightings of Brown Fish Owl, several more Himalayan Rubythroats, Small Niltava, Maroon Oriole and some especially cooperative Kalij Pheasants. Finally, we settled in for the evening.

Tarai Grey Langur by Daniel Keith Danckwerts

After an early breakfast, we slowly made our way out of Jim Corbett National Park. We took the scenic route following the edge of the Ramganga River and were once again treated with many fantastic species. Highlights included the Pin-tailed Green Pigeon, Coppersmith and Blue-throated Barbets, Collared Falconet, Red Junglefowl, Mountain Hawk Eagle, both Cinereous and Red-headed Vultures, Lesser Fish Eagle, Rusty-cheeked Scimitar Babbler, and best of all a surprise Chestnut-capped Babbler; the latter well outside of its normal range and certainly a notable record for the park. We finally arrived in Ramnagar for a late lunch, after which we once again explored the Kosi River in search of Ibisbill. This time we were in luck – third time's a charm – as David spotted a singleton feeding quietly downstream of our normal site. The bird proved especially approachable and we enjoyed some rare opportunities to photograph it before finally, it flew upstream and out of sight. With this major target under our belt, we left the Ramnagar area and began the three-hour drive towards Nainital. A scheduled stop en route gave us Bar-headed Goose, Ruddy Shelduck, Striated Heron, Common Moorhen and even a Jungle Owlet. However, with a fair distance still to cover, we spent most of the rest of the afternoon in the car and arrived just in time for dinner.

An extremely early morning, the following day, had us waiting in the pre-dawn gloom atop the Pangot Road. As expected, a Koklass Pheasant began to call as the sky lightened up. It didn't take long to find the bird but, quite unexpectedly, it soon left its calling perch and began walking uphill and in our direction. To our delight, we were treated to fabulous point-blank views as it crossed the road and appeared to circle us from above; a rare treat, even for us guides! Thrilled with our success, we headed further up to a spot for the tricky Cheer

Black Francolin by Daniel Keith Danckwerts

Pheasant. Several hours of meticulous scanning went totally unrewarded though we did appreciate Altai Accentor, Blue-capped Redstart, and Striated Prinia. Moving on, we visited some mossy elfin forest where we quickly located several mixed flocks altogether containing small numbers of White-tailed Nuthatch, both Coal and Yellow-browed Tits, Buff-barred and Ashy-throated Warblers, Bar-tailed Treecreeper, and Black-throated Bushtit. Our lunch spot then gave us several noisy pairs of Eurasian Jay, Rufous-bellied and Brown-fronted Woodpeckers, Mistle and Black-throated Thrushes, Eurasian Sparrowhawk, Yellow-breasted Greenfinch and Rufous Sibia. The remainder of the afternoon was then spent scanning for Cheer Pheasant though, once again, we were unable to find any. However, the scarce Long-billed Thrush served as a fitting consolation prize as we made our way back down to Nainital for the evening.

With another day to explore the Nainital area, we started at the nearby village of Mangoli. Within minutes of arriving, we had located our first target of the day; the diminutive Asian Barred Owlet. It turned out that there was no need to worry about this species as, through the course of the day, we stumbled upon two other individuals. A little further down the road, we glimpsed our first Red-billed Blue Magpies though these first birds proved considerably less cooperative than hoped, flying downslope and disappearing out of view. Several Chestnut-bellied Nuthatches foraged at eye-level around us, while Red-billed Leiothrix skulked in the thickets below. From there, we transferred to Bajun. After a quick break for breakfast, we tackled some 'flock-birding' and managed to draw in several notable species. The highlights here were Scaly-breasted Cupwing, Grey Treepie, Black-headed Jay, Yellow-bellied Fantail, Himalayan Black-lored Tit and the jewel-like

Green-tailed Sunbird. Somehow our lucky charm – Bablu – managed to spot yet another roosting Brown Fish Owl sitting quietly in a dark shadow. From there, we visited a nearby river where we enjoyed better-than-ever views of the delicate Spotted Forktail; a species many in the group so desired to see. Then, after a quick lunch break, we transferred to the Hidden Valley. Here we found Yellow-breasted Greenfinch, Chestnut-bellied Rockthrush and Black Bulbul. Finally, an evening vigil at our Long-billed Thrush site proved unsuccessful and we returned to our hotel in Nainital to escape the cold.

The following morning, we took a day trip down to the Sattal area; located at a slightly lower altitude, just to the south of Nainital. We arrived before first light with time enough to track down Brown Wood Owl. Thereafter, we entered a small hide where we spent several hours. White-crested and White-throated Laughingthrushes were by far the most numerous visitors to the feeding station but we also enjoyed sublime looks at Rufous-chinned Laughingthrush. A single Red Junglefowl came in to feed briefly, in the company of many Oriental Turtle Doves. However, by far the best birds of the morning were Grey-winged Blackbird and the unbeatable Common Green Magpie. As we were leaving, a large party of noisy Grey Treepies arrived together with both Grey-headed and Brown-fronted Woodpeckers. A most enjoyable morning indeed! Next, we walked along the road into Sattal before taking a small forest trail into the forest itself. Here we enjoyed the abundance of Slaty-headed Parakeets and Black Bulbuls; both feeding in the expansive lantana thickets. Other notable sightings included Pygmy Cupwing, Bronzed Drongo, Green Sandpiper, Grey-sided Bush Warbler and Common Kingfisher. Thereafter, we slowly made our way back uphill. In an area of scrub, we located

Large-tailed Nightjar by Daniel Keith Danckwerts

Koklass Pheasant by Daniel Keith Danckwerts

Speckled Piculet, Black-headed Jay, Common Rosefinch, Scaly-breasted Munia and Grey-backed Shrike. Finally, we visited Chafi where we found Slaty-backed Forktail and Scaly-breasted Cupwing.

Our last morning in the highlands was spent along the Snow View Road, as we searched for the shy and reclusive Hill Partridge. Unfortunately, we were unsuccessful in finding this species though we did enjoy some busy ‘flock-style’ birding with many of the species already seen previously. We also tried the Mall Road, running along the edge of Nainital, which proved most worthwhile. The highlights here were Pink-browed Rosefinch, several Golden Bush Robins including at least two glowing males, Yellow-breasted Greenfinch, the uncommon Scaly-breasted Woodpecker, and Rufous-breasted Accentor. Thereafter, we returned to the hotel to pack up and have our lunch before we then left for Kathgodam. Here we caught the train back to Delhi though not even this could stop us from birding. From the train window, we sighted Black Drongo, Great Egret, Black Kite, Pied Myna and our first Brahminy Starlings of the tour. We arrived in Delhi after dark so immediately transferred to the hotel and settled in for the evening.

The next day was largely reserved as a travel day as we left Delhi and slowly made our way down to Sawai Madhopur; our base for the next four nights as we visited the famous Ranthambhor Nature Reserve. We stopped in some interesting looking habitats en route and were able to see the House and Indian Jungle Crows, Eastern Cattle Egret, Bank Myna, Large Grey Babbler, Spotted Owlet, Bay-backed Shrike, Rufous Treepie, Laughing Dove and Shikra. A short walk in some scrub outside of the town of Kishangarh also proved most worthwhile as we were able to find a handful of Sirkeer Malkohas – surprisingly common in this habitat – as well as Blue Rock Thrush, Common Babbler, and Purple Sunbird. We arrived after dark so quickly ate our dinner, then settled in for an early night ahead of our exciting safaris.

Ranthambhore is tremendously diverse in habitat, though the forest here is generally far more open than it is in Jim Corbett National Park. For this reason, Tiger is more easily seen here than in Corbett NP. In spite of already having seen these incredible animals, we enjoyed six half-day safaris in the park primarily focussed around improving on our sightings of tiger as well as adding many of the reserve's other 'special' mammals and birds. We explored zones one through five and were afforded the opportunity to explore zone three for a second time. Tiger was seen incredibly well by all; first, we encountered Arrowhead and her two cubs in some long grass, then we found the cubs for a second time and finally we enjoyed the breath-taking sight of the female returning from her hunt and roaring to call her cubs. An entirely different tiger was also glimpsed briefly by some right beside the entrance gate, taking the total number of individuals seen on the entire tour to seven. Other notable mammal sightings in the park included daylight views of a hunting Jungle Cat, several small herds of Nilgai, abundant Chital and Sambar, Northern Plains Grey Langur, Ruddy and Indian Grey Mongooses, and Wild Boar. In terms of birds, we enjoyed crippling views of many of the reserves top birds; the Brown-capped Pygmy, White-naped and Yellow-crowned Woodpecker, the endemic Painted Spurfowl, Plum-headed Parakeet, Dusky Eagle Owl, Jungle Bush Quail, Grey Francolin, and both Long-billed and Olive-backed Pipits. Between our drives in the park, we also explored the degraded scrub outside our hotel. Here we encountered the Desert and Variable Wheatears, Painted Sandgrouse, Lesser Whitethroat, both Common and Large Grey Babblers, Blyth's Pipit, Indian Bush Lark, Rufous-fronted Prinia, Red-headed Bunting, and Eurasian Wryneck. Finally, our night explorations in the area gave us Spotted Owlet.

Common Kingfisher by Daniel Keith Danckwerts

Outside our hotel. Here we encountered the Desert and Variable Wheatears, Painted Sandgrouse, Lesser Whitethroat, both Common and Large Grey Babblers, Blyth's Pipit, Indian Bush Lark, Rufous-fronted Prinia, Red-headed Bunting, and Eurasian Wryneck. Finally, our night explorations in the area gave us Spotted Owlet.

confiding Desert Wheatear, several Tawny Pipits, Great Grey Shrike, and Barred Buttonquail. We arrived in Bharatpur with time enough to visit the temple area of Keoladeo National Park. Here we noted many Citrine and White Wagtails, Spotted Owlet, Indian Grey Hornbill, both Common and Green Sandpipers, Common Redshank, Bluethroat, and a quick Brooke's Leaf Warbler. At sunset, we waited in position along a long straight gravel road where we viewed Indian Crested Porcupine, Small Indian Civet (guide only), and Golden Jackal. A single Striped Hyena was also seen tremendously far off, but the sighting was most unsatisfactory, in the fading light, and was thus left from our species list. Some were also lucky enough to see Short-eared Owl on the rickshaw ride back to the entrance. From there, we transferred on to our hotel for the evening.

Indian Courser by Daniel Keith Danckwerts

The next day, we drove north to the Kumher Fields arriving at first light. It took an hour or so, but we eventually found a small flock of Indian Coursers, which allowed a close approach and incredible scope views. Other species seen here included the Painted Stork, Red-necked Falcon, Tawny Pipit, huge flocks of Greater Short-clawed Lark numbering in the thousands, and Egyptian Vulture. From there, we returned to the Keoladeo National Park which was where we spent the remainder of the day. Most of our time was spent scanning the vast water bodies where we enjoyed thousands of Northern Pintail, Eurasian Teal, Eurasian Coot, Common Moorhen, both Bar-headed and Greylag Geese, Garganey, and the Knob-billed, Indian Spot-billed and Ferruginous Ducks. Areas of flooded grass supported Great, Intermediate, and Little Egrets, Black-necked and Painted Storks, both Citrine and White Wagtails, Grey-headed Swamphehen, and a trio of stately Sarus Cranes. The thickets gave us Black Bittern, Bluethroat, Moustached Warbler, and Tickell's Thrush. Finally, birds of prey were abundant, and we were able to add the Indian and Greater Spotted Eagles, Eastern Imperial Eagle, and Booted Eagle. After quite an overwhelming day – for sheer numbers of birds alone – we returned to the hotel and visited a small hide specializing in nocturnal mammals. Though we spent a couple of hours in the hide, only Wild Boar arrived to investigate.

Sambar by Daniel Keith Danckwerts

Our efforts to find the beautiful Orange-headed Thrush had thus far proven unsuccessful, both at the Okhla Bird Sanctuary and at Keoladeo National Park. Thus, we devoted the first part of the following morning to explore the grounds of our lodge for this species. In nearly two hours of searching, we had drawn a complete blank and we, therefore, had to continue with our plans for the day. We visited the abandoned city of Fatehpur Sikri, dating back to the 1500s, before driving through Agra to the Chambal River Safari Lodge. After checking in, we located the resident pair of Brown Hawk-owls at their day roost before enjoying a delicious lunch. We then drove down to the Chambal River and spent the remainder of the afternoon boating on the river. Perhaps the major highlight here was a pair of endangered Ganges River Dolphin; though they showed extremely well, the animals were tremendously shy and we soon lost sight of them. Other notable sightings on the river included the Sand Lark, River Lapwing, Great Stone Curlew, Temminck's Stint, both River and Black-bellied Terns, and Pallas's Gull. We also found several Gharials and Mugger Crocodiles, as well as Yellow-bellied Tent Turtles. Finally, we returned to the hotel for dinner. After dinner, a couple of us explored the gardens and quickly found Common Palm Civet.

Plum-headed Parakeet by Daniel Keith Danckwerts

Our final morning of the tour was again devoted to finding the Orange-headed Thrush. This time, most of the group were rewarded with quick views of this shy species either on the ground or otherwise flying across a small forest path. From there, we returned to Agra where we visited the Taj Mahal – one of the greatest and most beautiful architectural masterpieces in the world. While the tens of thousands of tourists enjoyed the Taj, we soon diverted our interests to the birds on the Yamuna River commenting that we were perhaps some of the only people to ever discuss the details of Black-headed and Brown-headed Gull identification at this location. The river gave us Black-headed and Caspian Gulls, Little Stint, Common Redshank, Wood and Marsh Sandpipers, Common Greenshank, and Dalmatian Pelican while small numbers of Egyptian Vulture and Black Kites soared overhead. From there, we drove to our lunch spot before returning to town to learn about the construction of the Taj and marble inlays. Finally, we embarked on the long drive back to Delhi where we enjoyed a final dinner together before bidding each other farewell as we embarked on our onward travels.

On behalf of myself, Bablu, and David – I'd like to express a most heartfelt thank you to all the guests on the tour both for their interest in the trip, but also for their wonderful company.
